DETAILED ACTION

Examiner's Statement of Reasons for Allowance

1. Claims 1-9, 11-25 and 27-36 are allowed over prior art.
2. This action is in reply to applicant's correspondence of 10 October 2006.
3. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for the indication of allowable claimed subject matter.
4. As per claims 1, 17, 33 and 34 generally, prior art of record, Liao et al, U.S. Patent 6,606,663 B1, fails to teach alone, or in combination, other than via hindsight, at the time of the invention, the features as discussed and remarked upon in the response of 10/10/2006 to office action of 6/9/2006.

Specifically, (as per claim 1, for example) prior art dealing with intermediary network authentication devices/platforms (i.e., proxies, gateways, etc.,) in large networks (i.e., mobile/enterprise oriented), is generally known to exist per se, (i.e., Chen, Yih-Farn, et al, 'iMobile EE-An Enterprise Mobile service Platform', Wireless Networks 9, 2003, pp. 283-297, Nowhere in the prior art is found collectively the italicized claim elements (i.e., the use of the intermediary devices to alter the packet content and flow control/header information (i.e., alteration beyond simple header address changes associated with routing via passage through intermediate network nodes) to effect authentication for the session state control (i.e., connection and state initialization) during a client/server configuration access (control) of server resources on a packet basis), at the time of the invention; serving to patently distinguish the invention from said prior art;

"1. In a data communications device, a method providing authentication of a client device to a server device, the method comprising the steps of:

detecting a requirement for authentication of a request for data sent from a client device to a server device; creating an authentication response in response to the step of detecting the requirement for authentication, the authentication response containing authentication information required by the server device to allow the client device to access data via the server device; inserting the authentication response into the data communications session between the client device and the server device, the authentication response authenticating, to the server device, access to the data by the client device; maintaining the data communications session between the server device and the client device in the presence of authentication response information inserted into the data communications session between the client device and the server device by;

maintaining connection state data in the data communications device that tracks an amount of extra data associated with the authentication response that is inserted into the data communications session between the client device and the server device; and modifying connection information within packets passing through the data communications device that are exchanged between the client device and server device using the data communications session in order to allow the client and server device to maintain proper respective first and second connection states for the data communications session regardless of the amount of extra data added in the data communications session due to insertion of the authentication response."

5. Dependent claims 2-9, 11-16, 18-25, 27-32, 35 and 36 are allowable by virtue of their dependencies.
